SERIOUS LEAD SHORTAGE FORCES MOTOR-ISTS TO EXTEND BATTERY LIFE

A shortage of Automobile Batteries, likely to be felt keenly over the nation as severe cold weather sets in, dictates that car owners conserve to the utmost in use of their batteries and go to more than normal pains to keep them in service, according to M. E. St. Aubin, director of the service section of General Motors.

"There is no way to make a new battery out of an old one, but batteries can be made to last longer if proper care is given them," said Mr. St. Aubin. The seriousness of the situation traces back to a lead shortage, which has been pronounced in the automotive industry for many months. To avoid battery trouble, and possible loss of use of a car because a new battery may not be available, we offer the following suggestions:

1. Have the battery case examined for cracks and leaks at the top where the cells are sealed. Test the battery for charge—if necessary, have the battery brought up to full charge. (Even a fully charged battery has only 40 per cent of its energy available at zero temperature.)

2. Make sure that the battery cables are not corroded or frayed and the insulation is not eaten 3. Have the generator inspected to be sure that it will be able to furnish sufficient current to keep the battery fully charged. 4. To reduce the battery current required to start the car, have the spark plugs cleaned and the gaps set to specifications. The spark plugs' wires should be inspected

5. Distributor points that are pitted and burned will use more battery energy also. They should be filed or replaced and adjusted. 6. Remove excessive drag in the engine and transmission by changing the oil and grease to the proper winter grade. 7. Practice starting the car with the clutch disengaged so that the battery won't have to turn the gears in the transmission as well as the engine. 8. When starting the car make sure the headlights are off as they draw between 35 to 40 watts ergy. which the battery must furnish. Finally, it is important at all times to keep the battery filled with water to the proper level.

Pleading fo his friend and brother, the young slave Onesimus, he says: III. "If Thou Count Me a Partner, Receive Him" (vv. 17-21). Partners share the benefits and burdens of their joint enter prise. Partners in the gospel, like Paul and Philemon, shared not only piritual blessings, but also the re such an item to Philemon in the reurn of Onesimus. Something had to be done about the debt of Onesimus, his failure as a servant. Paul

It has been pointed out that there here a blessed example of the ninder of indebtedness. Everything Philemon had and was he owed to Paul; but, says the latter, "I will not speak of that now." No right-thinking person is content always to be on the receiving vor or the smallest child who feels the love of another wants to respond The considerate friend will, therefore, not always insist on giving, bu will graciously (like Paul) open
